Provincial Programs

In 2020, four Strategic Clinical Networks merged with their corresponding provincial health program to form a single integrated portfolio. The Primary Health Care Integration Network was the first to adopt and operate with a shared provincial leadership model (since 2017).

Leaders from each team have been working to integrate and align activities and define a structure that best serves the needs of Albertans. Their organizational structure varies, but all teams have retained the capability and function of the SCN Scientific Offices, their partnerships with the research community, and quality improvement projects and initiatives of the SCN, its patient and family advisors, community partners and advisory committees.

In some cases, the Scientific Office is integrated as part of a Program Knowledge, Evidence and Innovation Division, supporting clinical and program excellence through evidence generation and synthesis, engagement with the research community, testing and implementation science. These functions intersect with health surveillance, informatics, program performance and impact.

Key contacts are provided for each provincial program, focusing on the research and innovation capabilities. This list is not exhaustive and information provided reflects roles and vacancies at the time of writing.
