Inventory of AHS Suicide Prevention Programs, Activities, Resources and Initiatives: Executive Summary

Background
The purpose of the inventory (2018) is to provide an understanding of the depth, breadth and range of activities related to suicide prevention that AHS is involved in across the province as well as to highlight any potential gaps. The inventory will help inform suicide prevention programs and services moving forward as part of the new five year Injury Prevention Action Plan (2018-2023).

The inventory (2018) includes information on programs, initiatives, activities and resources that are delivered or funded by AHS. These activities are intentionally and directly focused on preventing suicide in Alberta.

Community Helpers Program (CHP)

- CHP is provided through the AHS Provincial Injury Prevention Program. CHP is a peer helping program designed for youth and young adults between the ages of 12 to 30 and is offered across all zones. CHP is delivered in community-based settings including, but not limited to schools, post-secondary institutions, community organizations, and workplaces that employ youth and young adults.
- As of November 2017, there are a total of 17 communities across the province receiving funding for CHP. This includes the recent expansion and enhancement of CHP to two new community organizations, and six new project-based CHP activities for existing CHP community organizations.

Honouring Life (formerly AYCES)

- Indigenous Health provides funding to 20 communities to implement Honouring Life, but has a reach to at least 15 other First Nations and all 8 Métis Settlements. Two of 20 Honouring Life program communities provide services to off-reserve and urban Indigenous families and youth.
- In November 2017, the 7th Annual Aboriginal Youth and Community Empowerment Strategy (AYCES) Working Session and Forum was held in Red Deer. Alongside program coordinators, Elder Morris Little Wolf and other honoured Elders presided over a (re) naming ceremony for AYCES. The new name, Honouring Life, reflects the program's objectives and its communities: Respect. Identity. Resiliency. Empowerment.

The forum brought together coordinators, youth and Elders from seventeen communities, Settlements and First Nations across the province, and included a notable presentation by Dr. Darien Thira on the foundational concept of Community is the Medicine, which focuses on bringing culture back to the community.

Limitations

- Limited changes or additions made to the inventory template sent to stakeholders:
  - Lack of confirmation of existing activities and limited responses to new categories.
- Inventory may not represent an accurate picture of all activities due to a limited sample of stakeholders. Varying levels of response rates from each zone.
- Information self-reported from selective sample:
  - Results may not be comparable due to subjective understanding of suicide prevention terms used. No definitions included to encourage common language.
  - Inability to accurately validate all activities AHS is directly delivering or funding, or participating via in-kind contributions.

Recommendations

- To ensure a more accurate reflection of ongoing suicide prevention initiatives that AHS is involved with across the province:
  - Update Inventory collection template to be more user-friendly.
  - Explore a regular Inventory review cycle, increasing the length of time between updates.
  - Explore a dissemination process that enhances accountability for respondents.
