Tips for Communicating About Suicide

Together we can help prevent suicide. Public awareness, education and communication strategies are designed to target beliefs, attitudes and behaviours.

Safe and effective suicide prevention messages...

- Promote help-seeking
  Identify the desired help-seeking behaviour such as calling a hotline, visiting a health provider or downloading a mental health app.

- Address stigma
  Use personal stories of resilience and recovery – examples of people who sought help and benefitted. Emphasize hope when talking about someone who experienced a suicidal crisis.

- Raise awareness
  Identify common warning signs (talking about wanting to die, mood changes, feeling hopeless, helpless or worthless), risk factors (a previous attempt, mental illness, history of trauma or abuse, isolation), and protective factors (strong connections to family and community support, a sense of belonging, strong coping skills).

Use the following tips when talking or writing about suicide:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Avoid...</th>
<th>Try...</th>
<th>Why?</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>using ‘committed suicide’ as this implies a criminal offence.</td>
<td>using ‘died by suicide’, which describes the facts.</td>
<td>Simple, non-judging language helps reduce stigma surrounding suicide.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>suggesting suicide is inevitable or common, and that it can’t be prevented.</td>
<td>emphasizing that suicide is preventable and help is available.</td>
<td>We can help prevent suicide by connecting with individuals, talking about suicide and removing barriers to getting help.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>using words or images that reinforce stereotypes, myths or stigmas, such as once someone is suicidal, they will always be suicidal or that someone having thoughts of suicide is determined to die.</td>
<td>showcasing images of support and hope, and expressing that recovery is possible – use positive examples and promote positive program or service stories.</td>
<td>People can have thoughts of suicide without wanting to die. Asking and talking about suicide and suicidal thoughts can help someone who is struggling.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>suggesting suicide is simple or an individual problem.</td>
<td>talking about suicide as a complex issue.</td>
<td>There are many complex factors that contribute to suicide, including individual, social and environmental factors.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Make sure you always include resources about how to get help, including hotlines and local organizations that provide suicide intervention.
